Dear Member of the Class of 1960:

Sharing these important college years with you has been a deeply satisfying experience. Our prayers and interests will go with each of you as you make your mark in the world as a part of the A-B family.

Affectionately,
The Shearers

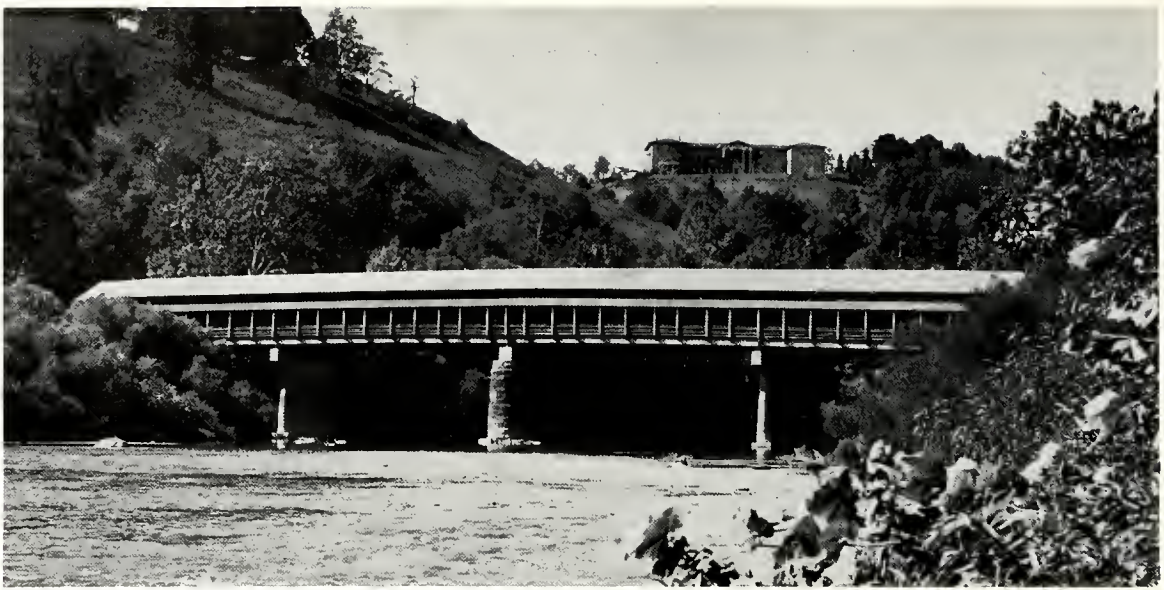

A dedication of words is surely insufficient to repay one who has given six years of her spirit and constancy to Alderson-Broadbush College. The words seem even less effective when the Class of 1960 relies upon them to express its feeling for that person. Thus this dedication is not a repayment, but an acknowledgement of having received the benefits of an education with a majestic personal touch.

The repayment, we hope, will come only as we reflect the ideals and enthusiasm for living as expressed by the example set forth by the serene, yet powerful, life of the subject of this honor.

Ideals are hard to come by, and their final attainment is reached only by years of difficult endeavor. She has quietly given us a pattern, intricate and beautiful, to follow in our fumbling to attain these ideals. Her demand for academic excellence, but not perfection, has been one of her major contributions to us and to our school. Her work "behind the scenes" in the area of student publications has been almost a thankless task, for the finished product of college annuals and newspapers are not often the proper recognition for one who has given wisdom and counsel in their preparation.

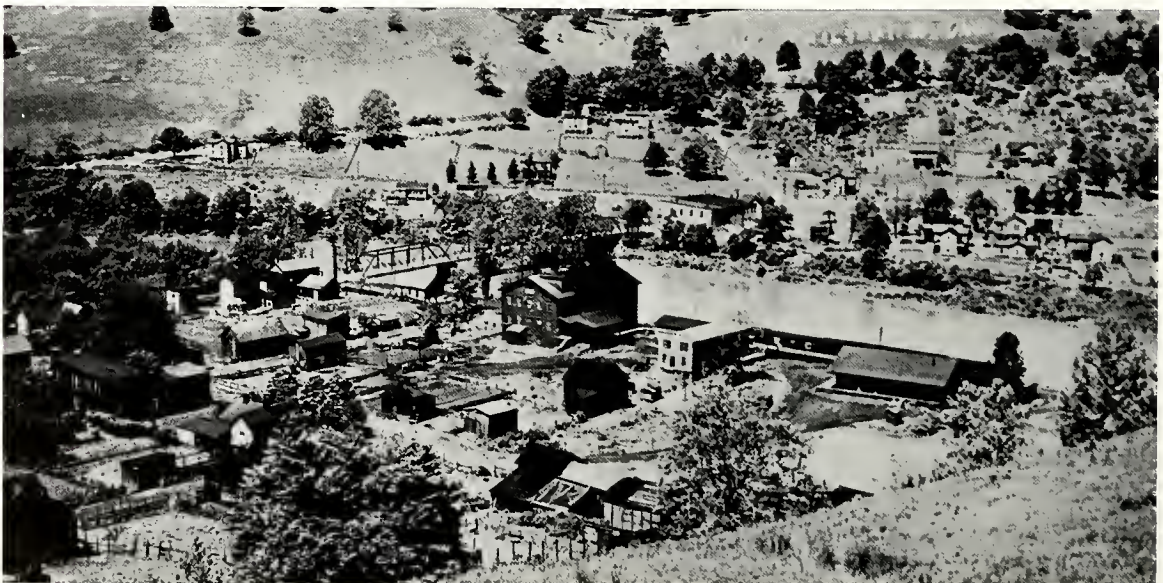

It is to a lady and a scholar, a Christian and a confidante, that we present to MISS LOUISE CALLISON the Class of 1960 and its memoirs.

Fifty years ago a struggling school moved from Clarksburg to Philippi. For many years the people in the little town nestled in the valley saw only one stone structure on the top of the hill. This was a building which still stands today, Old Main. Half a century later, the people in Philippi see the structures of a miniature town on the hill. Yet that miniature town would not be the college it is if it were not for Philippi. The latter's tie with the college is vital to the existence of both. Thus, in appreciation for Philippi's association and cooperation with the college, the class of 1960 remembers the town and the people who live there.

It would be difficult for the "hill folk" to imagine the town's not being below, but there is evidence that the hill where the college now stands was once bare. The iron bridge and a few dwelling places show that this is Philippi even before Alderson-Broaddus, then only Broaddus, laid its cornerstone in 1908. This is the same hill, though, which was held by the Union Army in their attack against the Confederates during the first land battle of the Civil War, June 3, 1861. Philippi, at the time, had the Union flag hanging in front of the courthouse one day, and the Confederate flag the next.

The covered bridge at Philippi is the only covered bridge on or across a national highway. More than one hundred years old, the bridge served as a passageway to transport troops and supplies during the War Between the States. More recently, hundreds of college students have passed under its protecting cover in order to get to Philippi.

Philippi is the seat of Barbour County, and its Court House is a beautiful structure located on Main Street in the center of town. Philippi was originally called Anglin's Ford for William Anglin, but it was later named Booth's Ferry for William Booth. This was near what is now Philippi that Richard Cottrill and Charity Talbott settled in 1780. Philippi was named for Judge Philip Pendelton Barbour.

Main Street, Philippi, West Virginia, U.S.A. This is only one block of the town's business district that serves the college and the people of Barbour County.

A town is not complete without its residents, and several personalities stand out in Philippi. Exclusion of some names is not to minimize the importance of any person, but C. B. Smith, Curtis Lambert, Mrs. Guy Young, Robert Gall, Mr. and Mrs. Carney Boggess, Col. and Mrs. Chesser, the Myers' Brothers and others are names that are surely synonymous with Philippi.

There are several churches in Philippi and they are all noted for their friendliness. The wooden structure of the Presbyterian Church greets people as they come into town over the bridge. Small, but powerful, the church, as do all the others, opens its door to all people, but especially makes welcome the students from the college.

Nearly all students, at one time or another, attend all the churches in the town. The Philippi Crim-Memorial Methodist Church is one of the larger ones in town.

The Baptist Church built a new church and educational building in 1959, and the Evangelical United Brethren Church is currently planning a building program. Other churches in Philippi include the Catholic, the Episcopal, and the Church of God.

The Myers Clinic, affiliated with Broadus Hospital located on the college campus, has a national reputation. It now serves only as an out-patient clinic. The opportunities it affords students, though, for employment are numerous. In this way, student workers come into direct contact with residents of the county and are also able to establish rapport with them better than any public relations office could.

This is simply a brief but candid view of Philippi. The real view cannot be given, for that comes through the eyes of the individual student. Philippi merchants and residents have been understanding not only with the individual college student himself, but also with the institution. They have pulled and prayed, invented and invited. Of course, the townsfolk have a college of which to be proud. And certainly the college has a town of which to be proud.

Baseball

Many bright sports highlighted an otherwise dismal, one-win, seven loss season for Coach Rex Pyles' baseball team. In spite of their 1960 season, though, the Battlers toughened up during practice and actual play, and they should be a team to be reckoned with in the tough W.V.I.A.C. next year.

Sporting only four seniors and four juniors, the young team was made up of a host of sophomores and freshmen. Hard-hitting Ray Cushman and classy fielding Willie Baker, both freshmen, were a welcome addition to the Alderson-Broadus roster. Junior Jerry Ware and Sophomore Tom Gay showed great promise for successful action in the 1960-61 campaign.

Those lost from this year's squad via graduation include Don Poluszek, Jim Miller, George Rhodes, and Carl Booth.

Returning next year will be veterans Trent Norris, Sonny Shade, Fred Brookover, Larry Carmichael, Jim Dunn, Rick Christofaro, and Ron Kittle.

Perhaps the greatest reason for optimism in the Battler camp next season is the emerging this year of a sophomore right hander, Ron Kittle. Ron stepped into the spotlight this season as one of the conference's top hurlers. Kittle was brilliant all season long. He brought the Battlers their only win, an 8-4 conquest of Davis and Elkins.
